IN FASHION NOW

The well-dressed woman is almost always one who knows how to take care of her clothes.

Beautiful and fragile garments deserve the best of care. They require special attention if they are to last as they should.

Never wash your silk, lace or nylon garments in the washing machine. Even the new type machines are not as safe as washing by hand.

When white nylon tends to turn yellow, never use an ordinary bleach. There are bleaches on the market for nylon.

The squeezing type action is the best cleaning method. Simply squeeze mild soapy water through the clothes. Rinse and repeat until the clothes are clean. Then squeeze don't wring, the water out.

If you are going to store your clothes for any length of time, there are some precautions you should take. First, have them cleaned professionably by a competent cleaner. If they are valuable, it would be a good idea to have them packed professionably, also.

Garment bags are adequate if you plan to wear the clothes ok-and on. Moth balls are a necessary precaution if the garments contain any wool.

Wrap white dresses carefully in blue tissue paper. This will prevent yellowing. Wrap colors in black tissue paper as well.

Pack away in large cardboard boxes or treated garment bags. Seal with gummed paper tape.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas on March 23, 1957, our all-wise Heavenly Father called from this earth to her eternal home our member and friend, Mrs. Florence Hamilton Barlow; and

Whereas she had been a faithful and consistent member of this Church and its organizations for a long number of years, and had given of her best to the promotion of the Kingdom of God, and was always in her place at public worship, as long as her health would permit; and

Whereas she was a woman of radiant personality, quiet strength, and unselfish interest in others, her death has caused a vacancy which will be keenly felt by a host of friends, in whose memory she will always live; therefore, BE IT RESOLVED—

First— That we, the members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of Memorial Church, Appomattox, Va., bow in humble submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well", realizing that our loss is her gain, and we offer this tribute of respect to the memory of our esteemed friend, whom to know was to love.

Second— That we express our deepest sympathy to her family, who gave her their tender and constant care during the sunset days of her life, and commend them in our prayers to Him, who is the source of all comfort and strength in times of sorrow.

Third— That a copy of these Resolutions be published in the Times-Virginian, a copy sent to the bereaved family and a copy spread upon the minutes of this Society.

"No not cold beneath the grasses, Not close-walled within the tomb; Rather, in my Father's Mansion, LIVING in another room."

CHARLOTTE COUNTY TOUR TO BE HELD ON MAY 1 AND 2

Charlotte County, "the home of Patrick Henry," will feature old homes, churches and public buildings in its historic tour planned for May 1 and 2, in cooperation with the Jamestown Festival.

It was at Charlotte Court House on a court day in 1799, that John Randolph and Patrick Henry had their famous debate on States Rights. The present court house was built in 1823, from sketches by Thomas Jefferson.

The public library, at Charlotte Court House, will serve as information center for the tour and tickets may be obtained there or at any of the homes. The library building was once the residence of Judge Hunter Marshall and William Wirt Henry; Patrick Henry's grandson often read law there. It's now converted into a library through the munificance of Col. David K. E. Bruce, of "Staunton Hill." The old vegetable garden in the rear is now a formal garden, with two tea houses and later white marble busts of six Roman emporers were added to the site.

Several old churches will be included in the tour. Also, the site of Cub Creek built in 1730 and known to be the mother Presbyterian Church of this area. A monument has been erected there to the Cub Creek Settlement. Among the older churches are Rough Creek built in 1769, and Ash Camp Church, originally an Episcopal Church built before the Revolution. The other churches are The Village Presbyterian and Mt. Tirzah.

Tankersley Tavern is probably the oldest house in Charlotte County. It was here that George Washington and his party had breakfast in June, 1791. It was from the portico of the Tavern in 1799 that John Randolph, of Roanoke, made his first public speech and Patrick Henry his last.

Roanoke Plantation with Randolph's office will be open to visitors. This was the old home of John Randolph, of Roanoke.

Mulberry Hill, old home of Judge Paul Carrington and built in the 1700's, is still owned and occupied by his descendants. Judge Carrington was the first Virginia State Supreme Court Judge.

Ridgeway was built in 1835 and is part of the John Coles land grant of 1740.

Arcadia will also be open for the tour. It was built in 1847 as a wedding gift for Captain John G. Smith and his bride, Ada G. Henry Smith, granddaughter of Patrick Henry.

Moidavia was once a girl's boarding school, built in 1832 by Rev. David Comfort. His school offered courses in Hebrew and Latin as well as modern Greek, French and German.

It was at Woodfork, the large brick home three miles north of Charlotte Court House, that Patrick Henry, early in March, 1799, spent the night before making his last public address at Charlotte Court House.

Ville View was built by Col. James Marshall in 1812. John Randolph, a close friend of the colonel's, often spent the night there, with his pack of English hounds.

This is the first tour conducted in Charlotte County in many years, and affords all citizens a wonderful opportunity to see some of the old homes of the county.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

It is natural for young children to discriminate among foods and to like some better than others. Vegetables with strong odors and sharp flavors are high on the "don't like" list of children.

Many prejudices are only imaginary. Very often children will not eat the foods their parents dislike.

For this reason it is wise to pretend at least to eat all foods around your children. In other words, set a good example.

Disliked food should never be forced on a child, but encourage him to taste it. If a certain food is pushed aside untasted, it would be a good idea to say, "Take one bite and if you don't like it, leave the rest and eat your dessert."

One bite seems like such a little bit that most children will comply. Quite often after he has taken "just one bite" several times, he will be over his prejudice and begin to enjoy this food.

When children are old enough to understand, explain the value of certain foods. Make sure they understand the relationship of health and well-balanced meals.

Cooperate with them when they begin studying nutrition at school. Encourage them to help plan the well-balanced" family meals.

Learn to cook a large variety of foods, so there will be no chance of mealtime monotony. If the children refuse, after much egort, to eat a certain food, experiment with new ways of cooking it.

Health and Beauty

Had you ever thought about how hard your body is working when you shiver? Shivering is actually a body's way of working up heat to protect against the cold.

Research being carried on at the University of Florida's College of Medicine to try to find out more about shivering and its effects on the different organs of the human body shows that the hypothalmus, a small center at the base of the brain, is the body's thermostat or heat and cold regulator.

Scientists already know in what general area shivering and sweating are controlled but not exactly what cells are responsible. The big effort now is to find out how their functions overlap and what pathways they take to tell the muscles and organs what to do.

Mapping functions of the brain's center can supply many answers to fundamental questions on tremors that accompany or are part of some diseases. An electrical current is used to stimulate portions of the brain in a laboratory animal and the muscle responses are recorded in an oscilloscope very much like a TV screen.

When the temperature drops, a chain reaction begins. The blood vessels contract and the skin turns white. The warm blood is drawn away from the surface of the skin and "goose" pimples roughen the skin surface. This decreases the loss of heat as heat escapes fatser through a smooth surface.

In animals the hair raises up to form an insulation but humans have to put on another sweater.

During the warming up process, there is a pinpricking sensation, due to tiny nerve fibers which have been anesthetized by the cold. Shivering can be so efficient that it can actually raise the body temperature to a higher level than in
